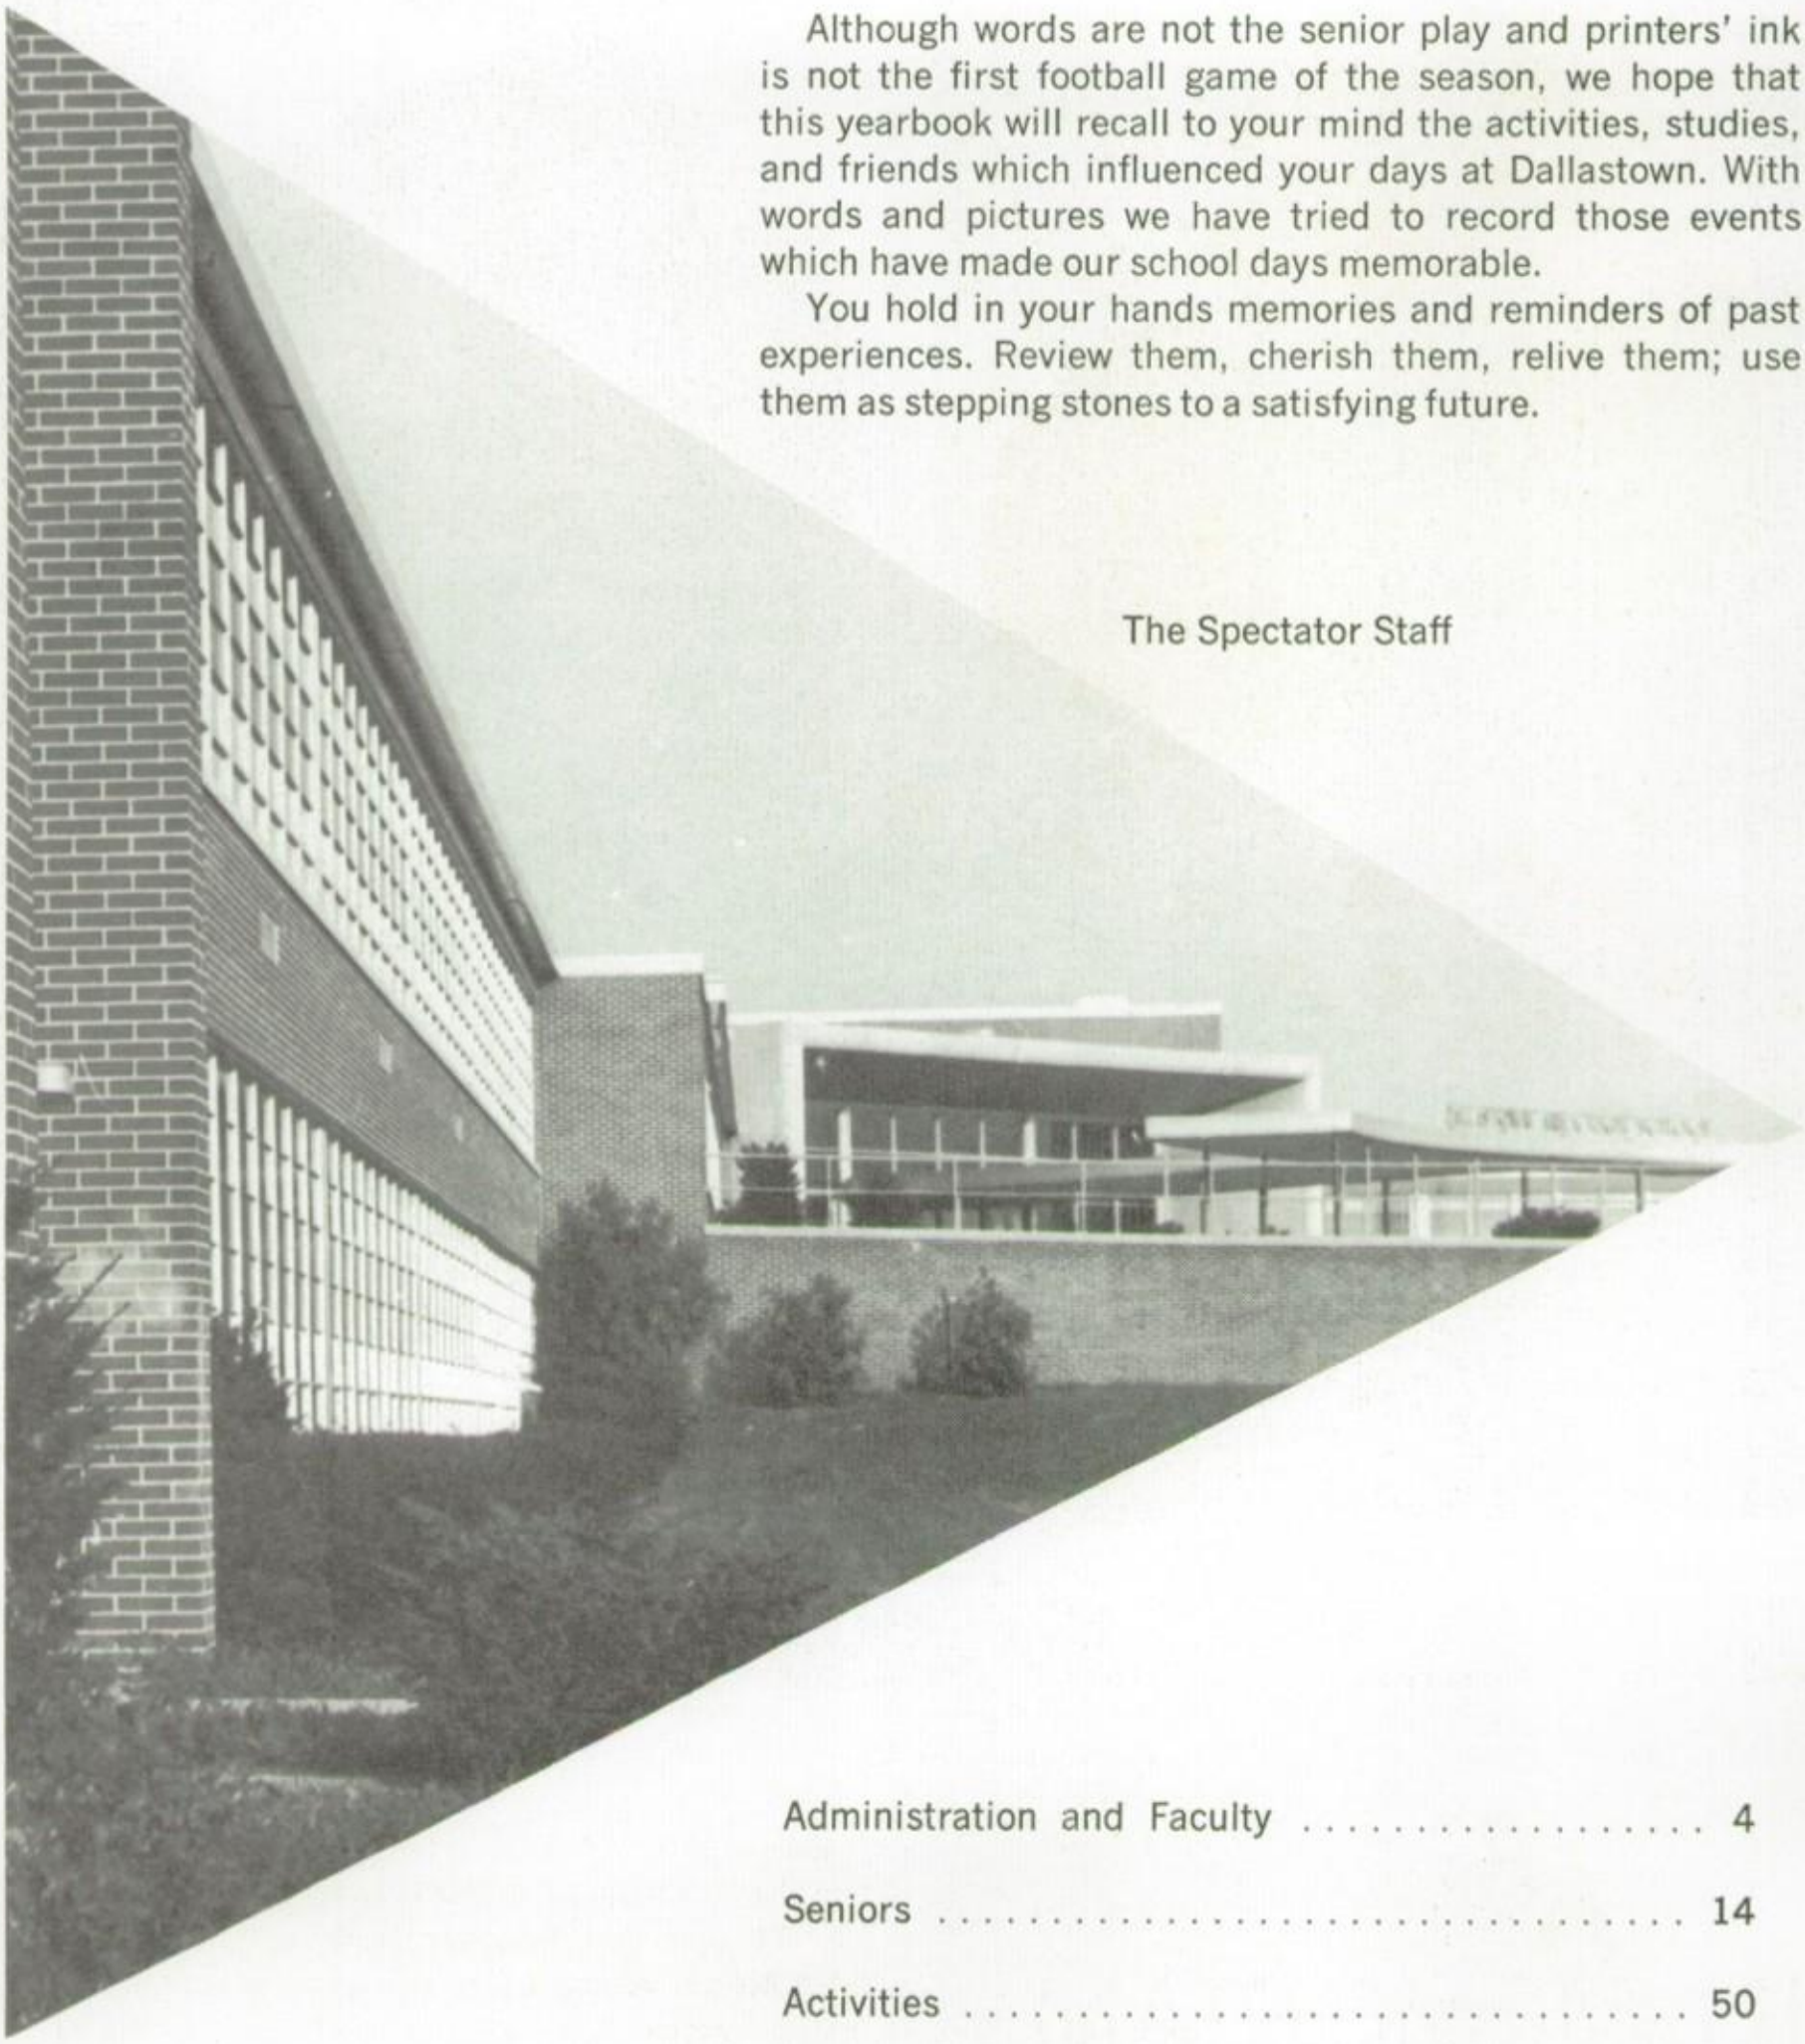
DALLASTOWN AREA HIGH SCHOOL



FOREWORD

Although words are not the senior play and printers' ink is not the first football game of the season, we hope that this yearbook will recall to your mind the activities, studies, and friends which influenced your days at Dallastown. With words and pictures we have tried to record those events which have made our school days memorable.

You hold in your hands memories and reminders of past experiences. Review them, cherish them, relive them; use them as stepping stones to a satisfying future.

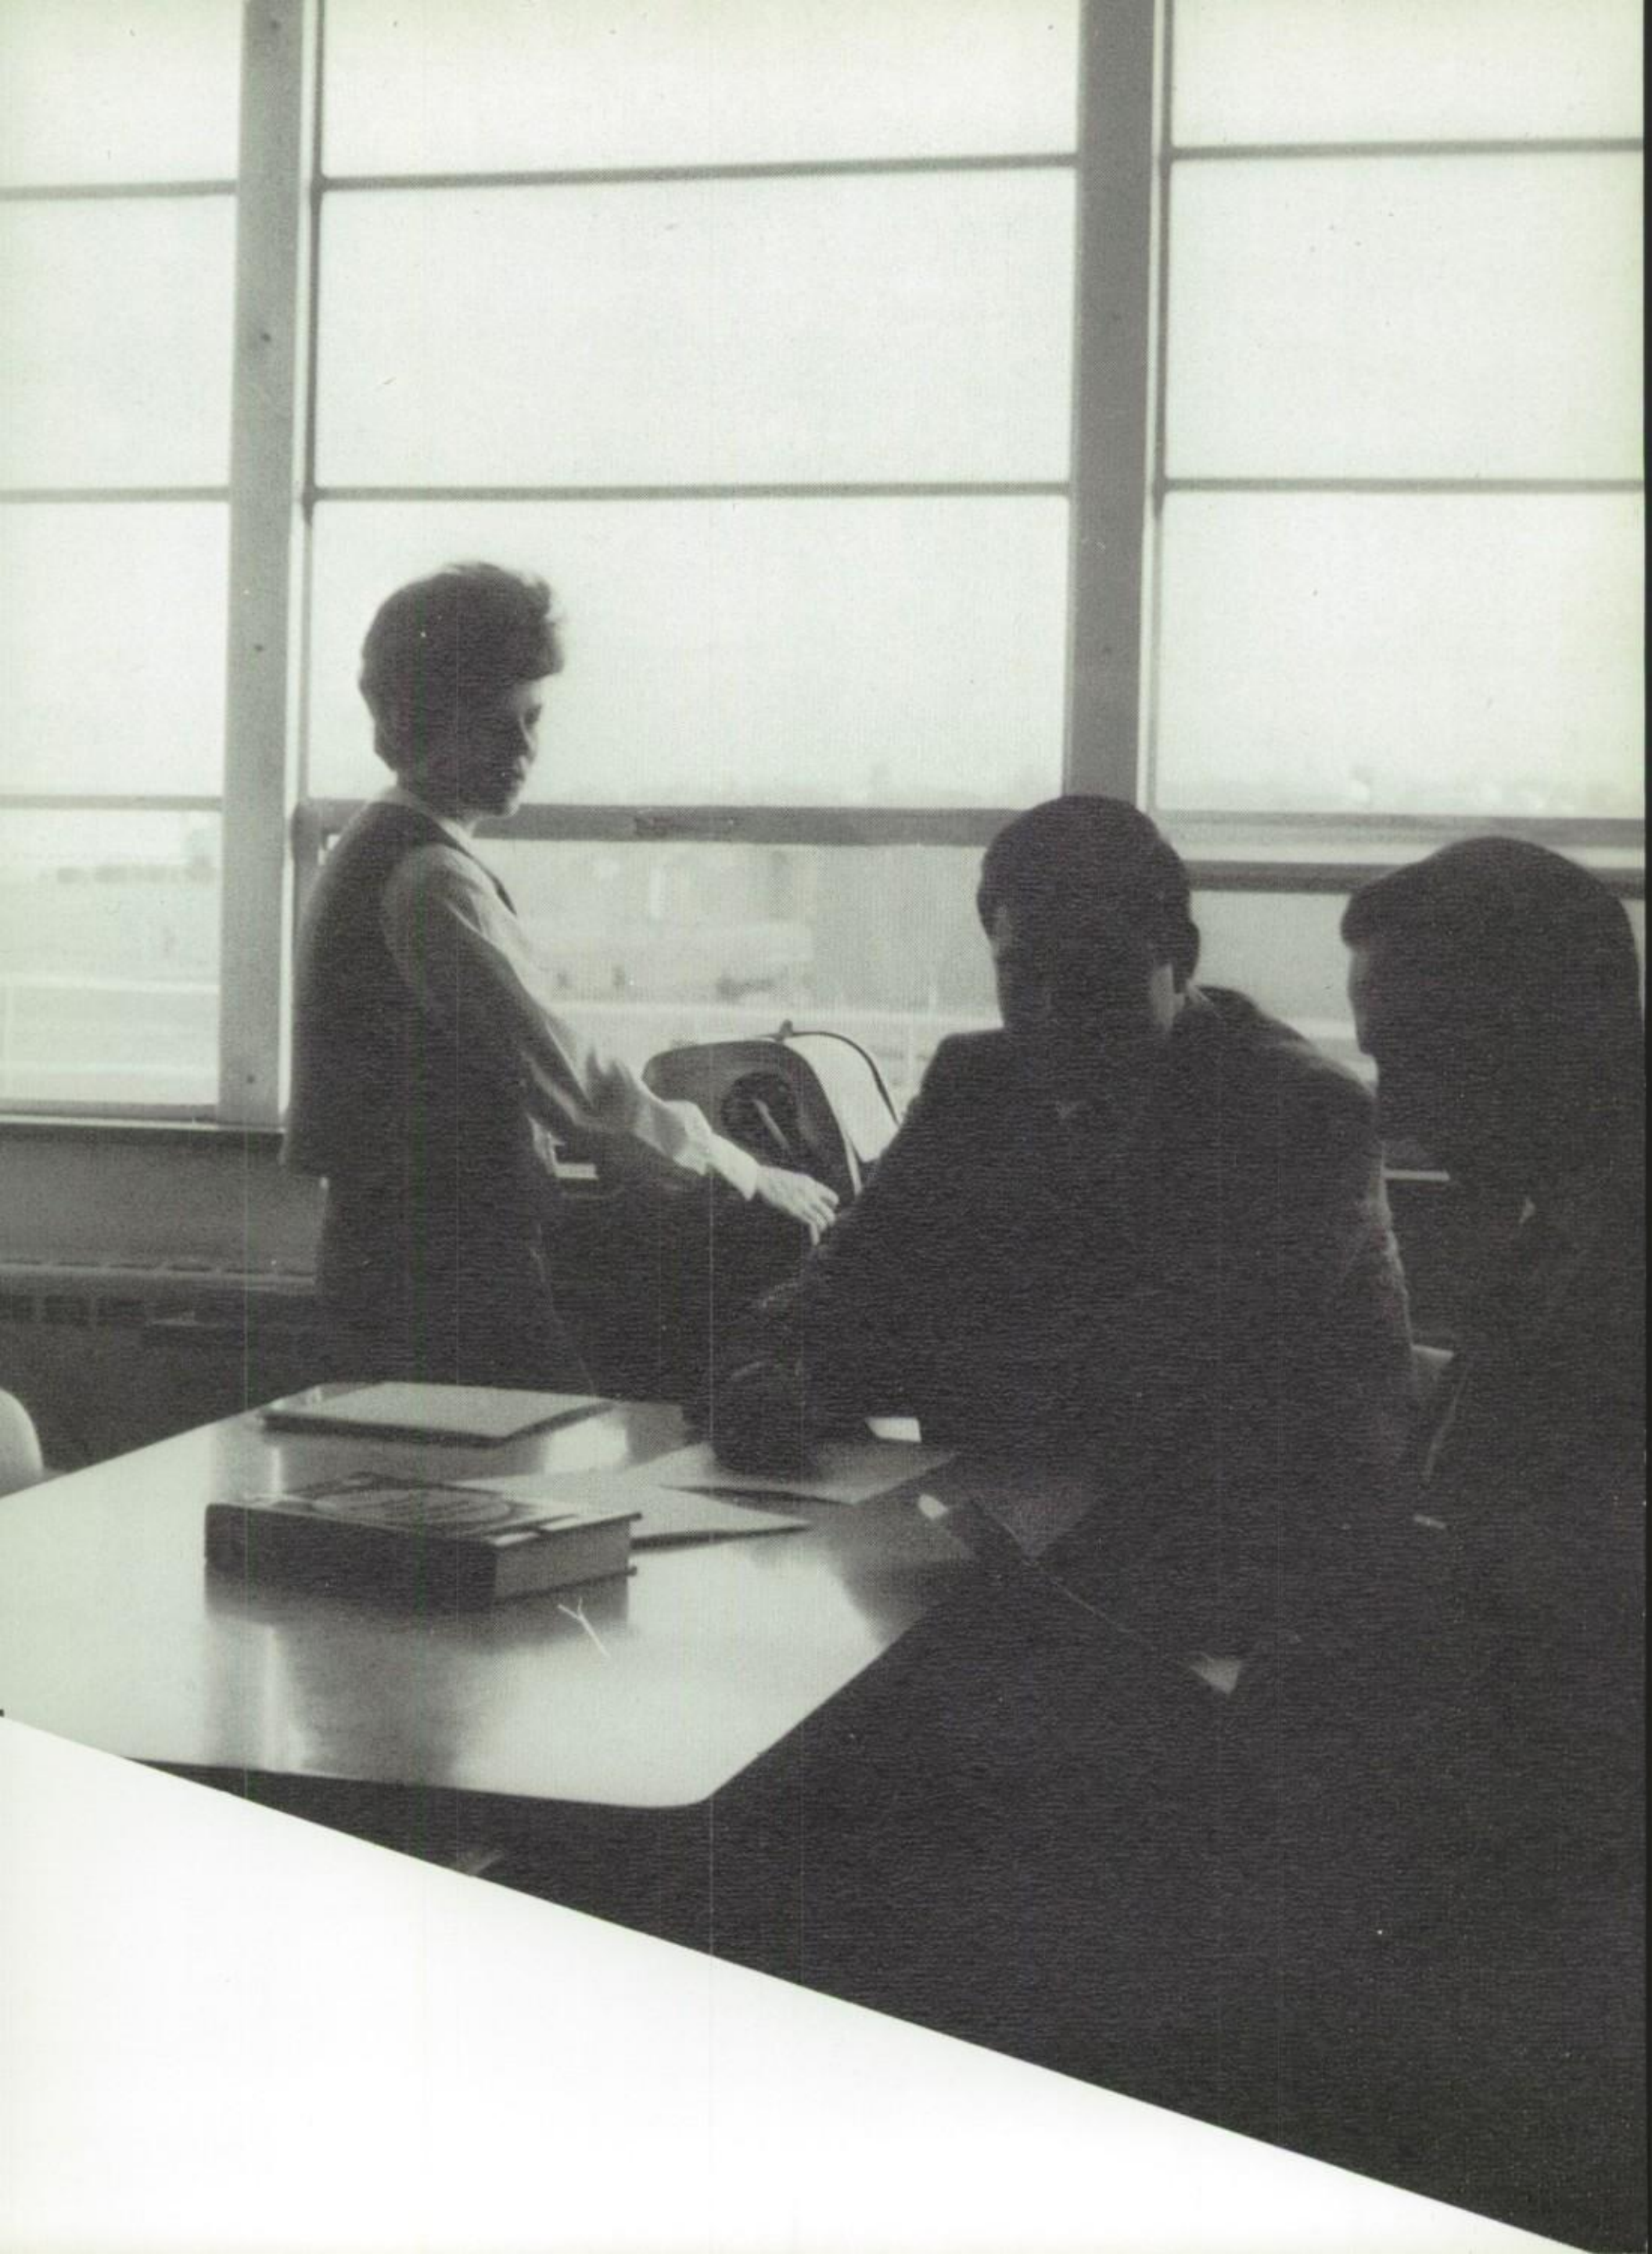
IN MEMORIAM

As we think of 1965, our graduation year, we remember a classmate who will not be graduated with us. We dedicate this yearbook to the memory of Greg Moore whose warm personality made class activities more fun, whose enthusiasm made the search for knowledge more enticing. As we leave Dallastown, let us accept the challenge to make this world a better home for all; let us strive to achieve those noble objectives which would have been Greg's; let us fashion a nation, a world which magnifies those aims.

ADMINISTRATION AND FACULTY



BOARD OF EDUCATION

SEATED: A. Brenneman; C. Shearer (Treas.); D. Root (Pres.); T. Smith (V.P.); M. Myers (Sec.); E. Adams. STANDING: N. Kessler; C. Warner; J Kohler; P. Rojahn; W. Hess; R. Bruns; E. Shearer; R. Smith.

MR. S. RAY GRIMM, JR.
SUPERVISING PRINCIPAL

Building character is one of the many responsibilities of education. Reputation is what our parents and teachers think us to be, but character is what our friends and God know us to be. A well-rounded individual will have a character that shines even in the darkest moments; a well-educated individual should possess this attribute. Reputations may come and go, but character stays with us forever.

It is my sincere wish that we have succeeded in helping each of our students with his and her character development, for it is so vital to future success and happiness. As you continue through life, I would encourage you to put your emphasis on character rather than on reputation, upon the significance of the individual and upon a purpose for life. The character you build will be your very own; cherish it.

Mr. McSherry
ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT and
Mr. Glatfelter
BUSINESS MANAGER

MR. CLAIR A. TROUT
PRINCIPAL

An eagle placed in captivity with chickens will begin to act like a chicken. Although it was not meant to be that way, failure to be what it could have been made it become something less than it should have been. Unfortunately this situation sometimes occurs with people, for they too often become less than they were intended because they choose the low road instead of the high road. It is our earnest concern for you as you are graduated that you set your goal high, leaving the lower level of action to that for which it was created. Days like these need clear thinkers, straight walkers, and noble doers. Be what your Creator intended you to be, and the future will be a happy, glorious experience for you. Our wishes for a successful future go with you as you become alumni of Dallastown Area High School.

MR. CLAY E. GIVLER
ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL

John Diebold, an international leader in the fields of management and technology, coined the word automation and stated it this way: "We have yet to perceive the magnitude and the true nature of the momentous change automation is affecting in our lives, in our business, and in our society."

We are living in an age when today's youth will need to learn during his productive years three different occupations, many of which are now nonexistent. With these conditions how can we prepare and graduate students from our educational institutions with confidence that they will master the future?

To be sure, no answers presently exist, but fortunately some rays of light shine through this complex problem. If a person remains flexible, he will be able to adapt himself to this continuous and rapid change. The fundamental human qualities he possesses such as imagination, volition, purposefulness, compassion, and love will, I am sure, help him achieve happiness and success.

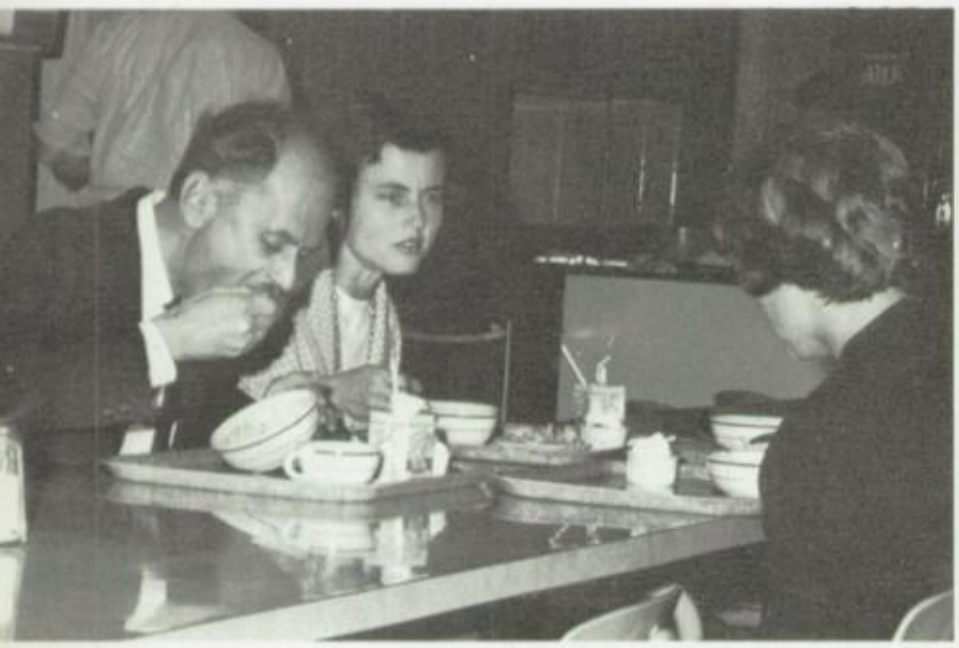
Did you hear the one about . . . ?



Good to the very last drop!

And now for my coffee break.

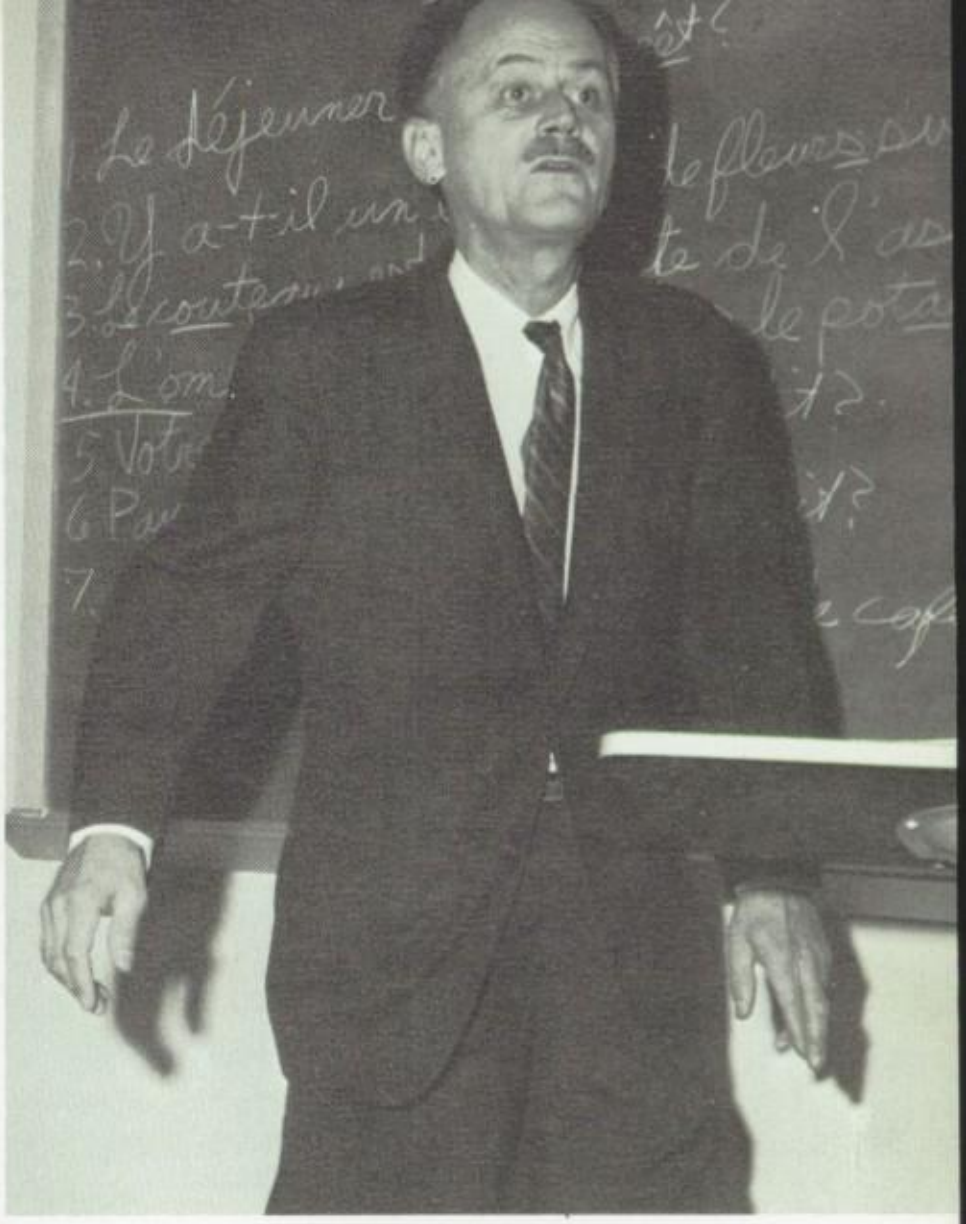
Did you ever have peanut butter stuck on the roof of your mouth?

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.

Cool, calm, and dry.

Money, or your life!

And I thought Senior High was boring!



It's a bird, it's a plane, it's superman.

Yes, sir, Mr. Trout.

What did you call me?

The boss says we're short one cent.

ACTIVITIES

STUDENT COUNCIL

Under the direction of Mrs. Mary Waltman and Larry Cisney the Student Council, composed of the Executive Council members and one representative from each homeroom, gave the student body a voice in its government, for each home room representative in turn informed his electors of the topics discussed at the meetings. Several members-at-large contributed ideas which had been presented at conferences. In a September assembly officers and members took their oaths of office, and Dennis Gable officially began his term as President of the Student Council.

Projects handled by this year's Council included the traditional handbook and a student directory. Council members planned and participated in sock hops and Homecoming festivities. Operation Santa Claus, a project shared by the school and community, was a successful goodwill project. With serious planning and investigation, the Council has done the ground work for a proposed exchange student next year. The various meetings and activities of this year have given each student an opportunity to govern himself.

Citizenship, scholarship, leadership, and service — these four traits qualify a student for membership in the National Honor Society. At a September assembly the Guidance Department conducted installation of officers and recognized the elected members.

Jeffrey Thomas presided over the Society, which performed service activities, introduced speakers at College Night, and acted as guides on Parents' Night. Senior society members had an opportunity to experience the freedom they will encounter in college because of free periods, study halls with no assigned room, granted to them by the Administration.

Members of the Spectator literary staff compiled memories of the class of '65 and preserved them in our yearbook. Editor-in-chief Leslie Grossman and assistant editor Carolyn Turner supervised a hard-working force of penmen, artists, and photographers.

In May of 1964, seniors selected burgundy and white as class colors, and chose carnation as the flower. After Miss Sylvia Hott, staff advisor, approved the theme "Light on the Future," the literary staff compiled the Spectator.

SPECTATOR BUSINESS STAFF

ROW 1 — M. Zumbrum; B. Payne; M. Sprenkle; Mr. Landis. ROW 2 — C. Snyder; K. Zuch; N. Keiser; L. Keiser; N. McLaughlin; D. MacArthur. ROW 3 — J. Hess; J. Hartman; J. Hare; L. Kling.

For several months Charles Landis, faculty advisor, William Payne, student manager, and the Spectator business staff lived in a world of patrons, advertisers, receipts, and financial records. The members solicited local businesses for advertisements and conducted the practice of patronage. With the donation of a dollar a patron had his name printed in the yearbook; this enabled the staff to meet financial obligations and involved parents and members of the community in yearbook production.

The Beacon literary staff, sponsored by Mrs. Brenda Deller, circulated eight issues of the Beacon during the year to keep Dallastown students well informed about school affairs. Under the editorship of Judy Wilt, the staff reviewed and previewed sports events, dramatic and musical programs, and other activities of student interest.

Students working with Ronald K. Good, advisor of the Beacon business staff, circulated the newspaper and enlisted community businesses to purchase advertisements in the paper. HOMECOMING

Over a parade of pageantry on the football field the announcement came; Lynne Alexander reigned as queen of the 1964-65 Homecoming festivities. Then she and her court retired to reserved seats to watch Dallastown play football against West York.

Decorated as a medieval castle, the gymnasium was the scene of the annual dance. Following Lynne's coronation there by last year's queen, Bonnie Miller, everyone enjoyed dancing to the music of the Sunlight Serenaders.

JUNIOR CLASS PLAY

When the final curtain fell on the Saturday night performance of "The Mouse That Roared," the cast, crews, and committees knew that everyone had been repaid for his hours of work. Faculty director Charles Hackenberry had instructed, pleaded with, screamed at, and hurled playbooks toward a gray-haired professor, a queen and her court, and football players in tights and tunics. But the final product was success as Queen Gloriana, monarch of the tiny European country of Fenwick, declared war on the United States. Gloriana and her court, faced with the problem of being an insignificant country, rose to world power as a fantastic plot unfurled.

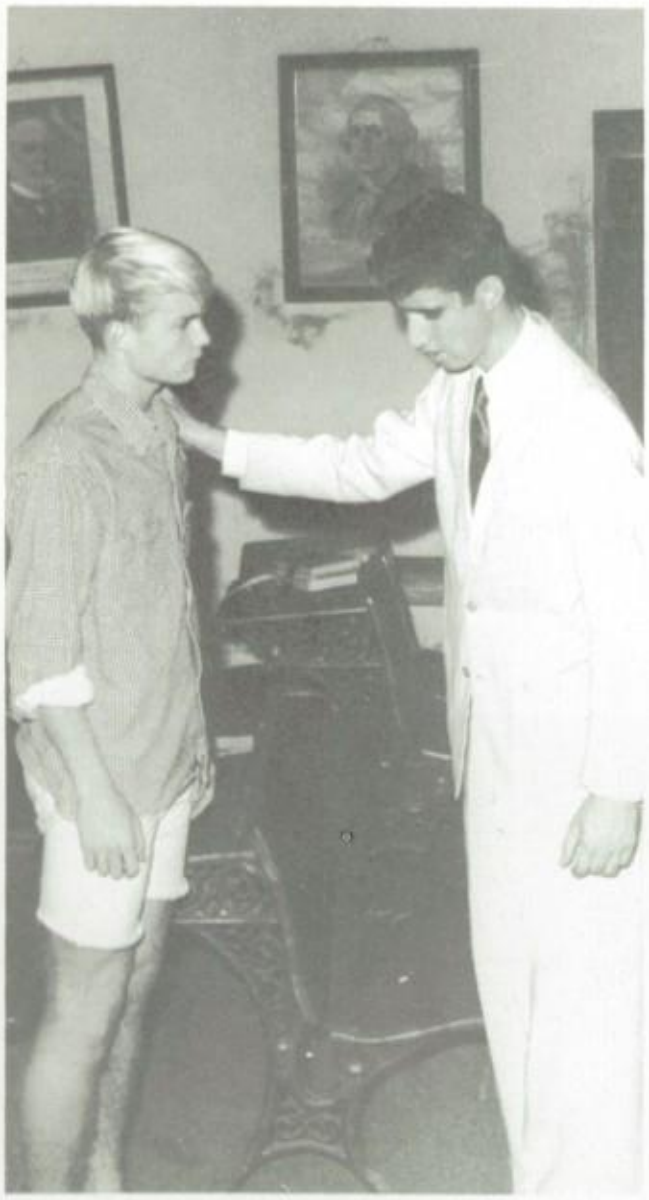
SENIOR CLASS PLAY



"The Thread That Runs So True" brought a Kentucky hills' atmosphere to Dallastown. Set in the crumbling Lonsome Valley schoolhouse, the play combined realistic dialogue, an effective setting, and "live" folk music to produce an evening financially as well as dramatically successful. The autobiography of Jesse Stuart, a Kentuckian who fought for his education, was the basis for the play; at the age of eighteen Jesse began his career as a teacher. In his struggle to educate the children of the hills, he encountered stubborn opposition to the spread of knowledge. But Jesse learned to respect the people's determination and to channel it toward his own high goals.
